How a gift in your Will helps people with diabetes

All IDDT's work relies entirely on the generosity of people like you, every penny really does make a difference. As a charity we are exempt from paying Inheritance Tax, Capital Gains Tax and Income Tax, so our work benefits from the full value of your gift.

Any gift	Makes a real difference.
£3,000	Pays for a year's supply of insulin for hundreds of children in developing countries. Insulin saves lives!
£15,000	Runs our Helpline for a year, offering friendly and understanding support, especially when the going gets tough.
£30,000	Funds a research study into the effectiveness of different types of treatment for people with diabetes.
£50,000	Provides information for a year to thousands of people with diabetes and those involved in their care.

The 3 main ways you can help

1. A Residuary Gift

This is all, or a percentage of your Estate to be given, after all debts, funeral, testamentary expenses and other gifts have been paid. A residuary gift is an excellent way to divide your Estate between individuals and your chosen cause. This gift doesn't need updating unless you choose to do so. It automatically keeps up with the value of your Estate by dividing it into percentages and then you simply choose who you wish to receive these percentages.

2. A Pecuniary Gift

This is a fixed sum of money. This kind of gift doesn't always keep the value that was first intended. However, you can seek professional advice about index-linking this gift.

3. A Specific Gift

This is a particular named item. This gift could be an antique with real or sentimental value.

Every year we invest our resources to help improve the lives of people living with diabetes and one of the best ways you can help future generations is to remember us in your Will.

Some facts about diabetes

- Over 2 million people in the UK have diabetes, of which 10% have Type 1 diabetes and 90% have Type 2 diabetes and the incidence of diabetes is rising.
- Serious long-term complications can occur with both types of diabetes including damage to the eyes, kidneys, nerves and heart. People need information, education and support to reduce the risks of complications.
- There is still no cure for diabetes.
